

MURDER IN A BROADWAY HOTEL

Tura Mura Struck George W. Lytle with a Club and Was Shot in Return.

Policeman McGinley Accused of Cruelly Clugging the Prisoner.

A boyish quarrel between two slender colored youths ended in murder at the Hotel Gladstone, at Broadway and Fifty-ninth street, this morning.

George W. Lytle is a bright little fellow, sixteen years old, who lives at 410 Seventh avenue.

Tura Mura was a West Indian mulatto, small and about fifteen years old. His home was at 110 West Twenty-fourth street. They were hall boys at the Gladstone.

Both boys were favorites with the guests, but yesterday they had a quarrel about 50 cents which Tura claimed to have won from Lytle at casino.

The result was that they were discharged by W. M. Haight, the proprietor of the hotel. Their dismissal was to take effect this morning.

At 7.30 o'clock Night Clerk Matt Sparks, sitting at his desk, heard three reports of a pistol in the basement, where the employees of the house were taking breakfast.

Hurry to the basement he found everything in a panic of excitement.

Cooks and waiters were running wilder and wilder, crying "Murder! Police! Police!" and in the middle of the floor lay the little Tura Mura, writhing in a pool of blood.

George Lytle sat in his chair at the breakfast table in a stupor.

In his right hand he held with nerveless grasp a smoking bulldog revolver of .38-calibre.

The story was quickly told by one of the employees.

While Lytle sat eating his breakfast, Mura had stolen on to the top of the building and had a club in his hand, two and a half feet long and two inches in diameter, such as are to be found in every bar hotel.

It was shaped like a baton and about the size of a policeman's night stick.

Creeping upon his enemy he dealt him a ringing blow upon the back of the neck near the skull.

Lytle turned in his chair, and as the stick was raised for a second blow he sprang forward, his hip pocket protruding at the waist.

Three shots were fired and at the second shot Mura fell back on his back.

One of the bullets missed its mark.

Lytle's hand dropped on his knee and he seemed completely dazed.

An ambulance came from Roosevelt Hospital, and the surgeon, after a brief examination, said:

"One bullet went into the thigh. That is not a serious wound. The other passed through the left lung, and it is certainly fatal."

Mura was removed to the hospital.

Lytle was taken to the Forty-seventh street police station, where he was held at the discretion of the police.

He Liked It.

Col. Atkins (of Denver): Young man, what was that dose you gave me afore you yanked 'th' tooth?

The Dentist—Cocaine and whiskey, sir. Col. Atkins—Pull some more.

Getting at the Size.

The President (thrusting down a newspaper, passionately)—Blank (at here's another Republican editor who calls me a figure-head).

A Magnate.

Newman (at a gathering of notables)—And who is that very distinguished-looking personage? Some famous General or great statesman, I suppose.

Oldboy—Er—not exactly. He's the proprietor of a Fifth Avenue art store.

Corporeal Accidence.

Victor (in New Jersey village)—And so, my little man, you go to school, eh? And what branches are you most engaged in?

Youth—Hickory an ash. Teacher's rattan busted last week!

Another Beside Him.

Mrs. Gazzam—How queerly Mr. Jaymitch acts at times! He seems beside himself.

Gazzam—That's not strange. He's one of a pair of twins.

His Proper Function.

Anthem Stope (the organist)—It seems to me your goods weigh pretty light!

Grocer—Yes? Well, you see, I'm like you, I run the scales to suit myself!

Trying, Very.

Maude (who is filling a temporary domestic gap)—I won't stand it another day. It's too hateful!

My dear, what is the matter?

Maude (indignantly)—That miserable girl was coming back!

Nothing Past About It.

"By Jove, the mail service is slow," said Smithers.

The trains are slow, the deliveries are slow, and I'm fingered if even the stanzas will stick!

Deeply Wronged.

First Trump—"I'll never go to that house again, Bill. I was insulted there."

Bill—How was it?

First Trump—"The woman took me for a book agent."

Too Appropriate.

Florist (to a customer)—You want an appropriate floral design, do you? What was the deceased's business?

Spokesman—He was an attorney.

Florist—How would something in the shape of a wreath strike you?

He Could Move.

John Smith—But how can you marry her? You are too poor even to pay your rent.

Jack Uppeers—Oh, but I expect parental assistance.

The Way of the World.

Criticism—I contend that "poets are born not made."

Skeptic—Ah, yes! That is always the way with you men of the world. You try put the blame for everything on the Lord.
